We can herald with the Meadville Republican, and announce from this "neck o' the woods" also, that if there ever were signs to be relied on for a Republican victory at an approaching election, there are signs of that kind now. There never was greater unanimity of opinion in the party concerning the certainty of success at a coming election. The Democratic organs rebash accounts of Republican defection, but the Republicans of this county know nothing about it. On the contrary, every one of the large number we have interviewed from all sections assure us without hesitation that the party is in perfect line, and will support the ticket more solidly than they have done for years. At other times it might not have been necessary to speak in local as in general elections, for the benefit of national principles, but now when the United States senate is in Democratic hands with the rest; when the fear of financial ruin to the entire business of the country has anticipated it in one-half the mills, shops and factories of the land; when the industries of the country are practically doomed, and the purity of the ballot box is in a fair way to be destroyed, it is a time when the Republican party ought to speak out in every state, county and township. The Republicans of this county have gone into the contest with a determination to win by the old-time big majority.

The workmen of this county have ample time for political discussion this fall. They have no work and they may as well talk over the situation and what caused it.

Congress has asked Hoke Smith for a detailed statement of his method of conducting the pension department. It can be condensed into a few words, "Strike at the soldiers' pensions whenever I get the opportunity."

The city of Indianapolis has elected a Republican mayor at the first election held since Cleveland carried the city by 185 majority. There was an average Republican gain of 12 in each of the 149 precincts, which is about the number of robbed pensioners and unemployed workmen in each precinct, who voted for a change last fall. It will be interesting to note the vote all through Indiana this year. It looks very much as though there will be a Republican victory in the Hoosier State this year.

Republicans should beware of casting complimentary votes for any of the opposition candidates. The Republican candidates are all good citizens and worthy of the united support of the party which placed them in nomination. It is only by a little splitting here and there that the Democratic candidates can hope to win, and this is not the year for Republicans to split their ticket. Not by any means. We believe no Republican needs to be told this in the light of the present state of financial affairs. Vote the ticket straight. That is the plain duty of Republicans this fall, if never before.

The Federal Election repeal bill has passed the House, and now goes to the Senate. If it shall get the signature of the President—of which there can be no doubt—it will give the bull-dozers of the South and the Tammany beavers of New York unlimited license to stuff the ballot-boxes and perpetrate just as much fraud as they think necessary to carry the elections. The restraining influence of the Federal watchers in New York will no longer hamper Tammany in the consummation of its rascally plans to count up big majorities, and the Federal courts will be powerless in the South to prevent suffrage being made a mockery.

COL. SAMUEL M. JACKSON.

Colonel Samuel Jackson, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, was born on a farm near Apollo, Pa., September 24th, 1833. He was reared at his birthplace, and at the age of sixteen entered Jacksonville Academy, at Jacksonsville, Indiana county, Pa., but before completing his course, the death of his father compelled him to leave school and abandon his contemplated liberal academic education.

At a very early age Colonel Jackson displayed an active interest in military affairs, and when only thirteen he was enrolled as a drummer boy in a company of the State Militia, evincing in childhood those talents which were afterwards of inestimable value to his country in the hour of her sore distress. For efficient service he was promoted, step by step, until he received a Captain's commission, and when the dark clouds of rebellion broke in their traitorous wrath Captain Jackson was one of the first to proffer his services in the great struggle to maintain our flag and a united country. He recruited Company G, of the Apollo Independent Blues, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves and was commissioned its Captain when it was mustered into service. His signal ability as a soldier could not long remain unnoticed. On July 2nd, 1861, he was made Major of his regiment; on October 28th, he was promoted the office of Lieutenant Colonel, and on April 16th, 1862, hardly a year after he first donned the blue, he received the sword and commission of a Colonel. The talents of the man were so marked, his character so distinguished, that advancement in the service was as steady and natural as the flow of the irresistible tide. At the head of a brave Regiment he proved himself a gallant officer, and through the whole of his three years' service was a conspicuous figure in all the campaigns in which his Regiment was summoned to duty. At the battles of Gettysburg, Wilderness, Spotsylvania Court House, and Bethesda Church, Colonel Jackson and his Regiment showed the fighting worth of Pennsylvania blood, rendering particular distinguished service at South Mountain, Fredricksburg, Gettysburg and the Wilderness. At Spotsylvania he commanded his Brigade and so well and so ably did he bear himself in this battle that he was brevetted a Brigadier General for his gallant conduct. But it was at Gettysburg that Colonel Jackson so eminently displayed his keenness of judgment, and powers of command. On the second day's fight his Regiment, just arrived on the battle field, lay in the front of the slope Little Round Top, overlooking that terrible valley of death from which the Third Corps had been driven back. The supports sent to the relief of third were fearfully broken, the enemy flushed with the success, was steadily advancing with a terrible and resolute purpose to carry the hill. Moments, then, were as vital as hours, there was no time to await orders from superiors, and Colonel Jackson, quick to see and realize the danger of delay, on his own responsibility ordered his regiment forward, and was at once followed by the commands in his rear. Down the slope they charged, and hurling themselves like thunderbolts on the columns of the advancing enemy, they fought foot by foot back across the Valley of Death, regaining the entire field so nearly and irretrievably lost.

At the battle of the Wilderness he again displayed his signal ability to command, and his ready power to meet an emergency, however trying. While commanding both his own and the second Regiment, he finally found himself cut off from his Division by a strong force of the enemy. Thus isolated from the Union forces and surrounded by a confident foe, the situation presented but one of two alternatives—death or surrender! But Colonel Jackson never learned how to surrender; the chance of cutting his way through the enemy's lines, desperate though it was, was promptly accepted, and at the head of his troops with an unequal valor, they broke through the rebel forces, and by a circuitous route reached the Union front, where for several hours they had been given up for lost.

During three years of active, hard service, Colonel Jackson won the confidence and respect of his superiors and the esteem and admiration of all within his command, and when mustered out he returned to his home and the quiet pursuits of a business life. To keep warmer and more vivid the memories of his soldier life, his comradeships and next dangers, Colonel Jackson allied himself with Whitworth Post No. 86, G. A. R., of Apollo; Encampment No. 1, U. V. L., Pittsburg, and the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Loyal Legion. For some time after the close of the war he was engaged in the oil business in Venango county, but in 1869 returned to his native county of Armstrong and was in the same year elected to the State Legislature, and re-elected the following year. In this position, as in every other that Colonel Jackson has filled, both military and civil, he won the confidence of those whom he served that, four years later, he was elected to represent the counties of Armstrong and Butler in the State Senate. At the close of his term of office he was again honored by the offer of re-nomination, which he felt compelled to decline.

In 1871 he was instrumental in organizing the Apollo Savings Bank, of which he filled the responsible position of cashier until April, 1882, when President Arthur appointed him Collector of Internal Revenue for the 23d district. He assumed the duties of this office on July 1, 1882, serving until July 1, 1888, when the first Cleveland administration came into power. In September of the same year he was elected President of the Apollo Savings Bank, which place he has filled up to the present time. In the many positions of grave responsibility and trust to which Colonel Jackson has been called, he proved himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him. As a soldier, he was obedient and brave; as an officer gallant and fearless; as a legislator conscientious and wise. His private life is without spot or blemish. Those who know him best, his friends and neighbors, all speak of his affability, his kindness, his generosity and his manliness. He is a type of manhood in which the best American citizenship is exemplified, and in selecting him as a candidate for the highly responsible position of State Treasurer, the Republican party has made a wise and happy choice. To its duties he will bring a ripe experience, a mature wisdom and a moral firmness that will insure their faithful performance, free from all criticism, and we bespeak for him from a united party a hearty and generous support.

GET OUT the vote. No Republican should think of missing his vote this fall.

ACCORDING to his report, sent to Congress, Hoke Smith has suspended 16,227 pensions up to September 1st. This is a shameful record, and there is no excuse for it. Included in this list are the old and crippled veterans whose names get into the papers as being in a starving condition and dependent upon their comrades because they have been so shamefully treated by the man who has the power over their pensions. The Union soldier who fought so nobly to preserve the nation are being turned down at the rate of over 16,000 in six months to gratify a rebel's hatred of them. Shame on such conduct.
